PEACEABLE END

TO CHURCH ROW

IS ANTICIPATED

That the Hawaiian Evangelical Association at its annual meeting beginning June 26 may be able to effect an amicable settlement of the factional differences that have rent the congregation of Kawaiahaeo church, is the hope of church leaders who are anxious to compose the dissension and thereby prevent the threatened resignation of Rev. H. H. Parker.

With all attempts to settle the differences proving unsuccessful the last month and a half, Rev. Mr. Parker today admitted that, personally, he could do nothing.

"If I could see any possible opportunity to bring about peace in the church, I certainly would make the best of it," he said. "I am in hopes, however, that the matter may be brought to a peaceful end at the annual meeting of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association."

Rev. Mr. Parker declared the trouble in the congregation represents not a division of the church, but merely a disturbance created by one faction. This faction, admittedly led by J. K. Kanihika, recently considered resolutions of "black of confidence" in the pastor.

Rev. Mr. Parker would not say to day that he had given up his intention of resigning. Not long ago he declared he might resign, but added he wanted to wait until after the annual meeting of the association before taking this action.

"I expect to see everything settled this month," he says.

U. S. CONTROLS

TIN PRODUCTS

The United States has assumed charge of the distribution of the country's tin supply and it will be but a few weeks until tin is no longer used as a container for many kinds of food products. The government has already prohibited the use of tin in the manufacture of tobacco cans, ice cream cans, cracker cans and containers for similar products.

The supplying of tin to canning factories in the United States is being supervised by the government. The shortage of tin is directly traceable to the war. The government has made a careful canvass of the country to learn the exact amount of tin now held by various manufacturers and it is asking them to cooperate to see that none of the tin is wasted or used in making containers for food products which can just as well be placed in paper cartons.

As a result of this tin shortage the price of canned foods will be extremely high during the coming months. It is almost impossible for manufacturers to get tin to make cans and that which can be obtained costs considerably more than it has heretofore.

COMMANDER OF

CRUISERS FETED

Hints of rain did not materialize sufficiently last evening to put a damper on the reception tendered Admiral T. Iwamura, commander of the Japanese training squadron now in Honolulu, by territorial, military and naval officials in the capitol and armory. Many Japanese men and women had seats in the armory.

The affair was strictly an occasion for full dress and attending guests made a pretty picture in the line which attended the formal reception and passed later through a brilliant conduit of Japanese lanterns and American and Hawaiian flags to the armory. Those not dancing enjoyed the sight from the balconies.

In the big militia building dancing was enjoyed until about 11:30, many of the guests finishing the evening at the Young Hotel roof garden. The crowd was just large enough to afford a handsome foreground for an appropriate setting of flags and ferns. The famous 25th Infantry band occupied a pavilion in the center of the floor and dispensed excellent dancing selections. Light refreshments were served.

Gen. Frederick S. Strong, Governor Lucius E. Pinkham and Capt. George R. Clark of the navy were the hosts and stood in the receiving line with their staffs to receive the Japanese admiral and his officers.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has sent the following reply to a request from a group of peace advocates for use of his name on a call for a peace conference:

"I prefer not to ally myself with the conscious or unconscious agents of the Kaiser in America."

DEUTSCHLAND AND BREMEN CAUGHT BY BRITISH, SYDNEY MAN CLAIMS

Visitor Says 150 German Subs Have Been Captured Recently By Allies' Methods

The Deutschland and Bremen, the two famous German undersea cargo craft built for trade with the United States and about which has been endless speculation as to their final disposition, are lying at anchor in England. About 150 more German submarines are with them in the hands of the British.

Staying at the Moana hotel is a prominent visitor of Sydney, Australia, Colwyn Jenkins, managing director of Robertson & Young, Ltd., one of the largest import and export firms in the Antipodes. He has this first-hand information on the monsters of the sea. He also has an exciting tale to tell of the sinking of a German submarine which he saw on the Atlantic while en route to America from England on a Cunard liner.

Jenkins says the Deutschland is in Plymouth harbor and her sister ship in an obscure town in the Firth of Forth. The visitor was here several months ago and recently arrived from San Francisco. He is on his way home.

Telling of destroying a submarine Jenkins said:

"We were about 80 miles west of the coast of Ireland when we sighted what first seemed to be a British destroyer coming at us full speed. Diver Blown From Water

"As it came nearer it was recognized as a German submarine running on the surface. It was of extraordinary size. The captain of the Cruiser ordered the crew of the six-inch gun to hold their fire until the diver came within two miles. Meanwhile a gray pointed, two funneled ship that looked like a merchantman, but which proved to be a converted British cruiser, hove in sight and bore down on the German from astern. Evidently the latter, which was making for us, did not see the cruiser.

"Suddenly we saw five puffs of smoke from the deck of the cruiser, followed by five sharp reports. Evidently all five shells found a mark. For the diver was literally blown out of the water.

No Survivors Found

A column of water, smoke and flame shot into the air 100 feet. The submarine sank instantly. The British cruiser came up and circled the spot for 20 minutes looking for survivors, but there was none. After standing by the spot where the German went down, the cruiser signaled us to proceed on our course. The cruiser turned and went whence she had come.

"It all happened mid-afternoon of a fine spring day, with a calm sea. Plainly it is getting to be tough sailing for the submarine that attacks in daylight."

RUSS REGIME

WILL WIN OUT, SAYS VISITOR

Russia will never conclude a separate peace with Germany but will fight with the Allies until German autocracy is overthrown, declares A. B. Rudd, special assistant for nine months to the American ambassador at Petrograd, who bases his belief upon statements made to him by leaders of the new republic. Rudd was in Honolulu today on his way back to Washington.

Rudd says that army people are now at the head of the Russian government, and that these men declare that Russia will fight to the end. He believes press reports that the big country is halting in the fight are largely sensational and not authentic.

"The state church, has sided from the first with the revolutionists," says Rudd, "and that is a big factor for the success of their cause. Besides this the principles of democracy are not new to the Russian people, the use of the popular vote having been allowed for years in the country districts. The only possible chance of Russia submitting to a separate peace now would be if the Socialists secure control—a thing not likely."

Russia's prohibition is of the "bone-dry" sort, says Rudd. And here score another strong point for the abolition of vodka, for this probably more than any other, was the reason the revolution was almost bloodless. Besides this, the people had expected a revolt for months and were ready for it when it came.

"I was in Ufa at the time of the revolution," says Rudd, "and we heard nothing of it for three days; not until the excitement was over, in fact. The revolutionists put an absolute ban on all news going out from the capital."

As special assistant to the American ambassador, Rudd and his traveling comrade, Cuthbert Lee, worked among the interned Germans from the business district of Russia. He says that Russia treated these men with all fairness. The property of all had to be sold within a certain time after the war, and the owners are each allowed about 500 rubles or $175 a month from the proceeds. Any remainder will be given back after the war.

Russia will receive the American commission with open arms, Rudd thinks.

TOURIST TRAFFIC SHOWS UP WELL

Business in tourists has been good the past six months, despite the declaration of war. According to the figures furnished by A. P. Taylor, secretary of the Hawaii Promotion Committee, there were 6147 passengers arriving in Honolulu from January 1 to May 1. In 1916 5515 passengers came to Honolulu, showing an increase of 632.

On through passengers the showing for 1916 was more than that of the present year, as 8311 passed through this port in 1916 while the total for the corresponding months this year was only 6224.
